GEORGE AND MARY HANNAH DAYBELL PRICE

George Price was born January 6, 1861, at Tipton, Staffordshire, England, the son of James Price and Ann Powell. Married Mary Hannah Daybell November 29, 1883, in the Endowment House, later, on April 1, 1889, in the Manti Temple. She was born January 9, 1866, at Staveley, England, daughter of Robert Daybell and Agnes Ann Bancroft. George Price died on March 17, 1938, Mary Hannah Daybell Price died August 15, 1952.

George was the second child in a family of thirteen. His parents heard the gospel soon after his birth and began making plans to come to America.

They sailed from Liverpool, England, on the vessel McClellan in April of 1864. They came by train to Council Bluffs, where they were met by a party whom President Brigham Young had sent to aid them.

They arrived in Salt Lake on September 24, 1864, and together with the Powell and Payne families were assigned to locate in Heber.

These three families lived in one room with a dirt floor and roof. At night the other furniture was piled in the corner and beds were spread out on the floor.

In a few years, the Price family acquired farm land in Charleston and raised their family there.

Mary, as an infant, came across the plains in the Samuel White company in 1866.

At the north fork of the Platte River on August 16, 1866, her father, Robert, left the train to find game to add to their food supply and was never seen again. It was a great sorrow to his wife that they had to go on, not knowing what had happened to him.

Upon arriving in Utah, Agnes Daybell and the baby daughter, Mary Hannah, went to live with Robert Daybells' father and his family in Charleston, where in January of 1867 another baby girl, Katie Elizabeth, was born.

On November 29, 1883, George Price and Mary Hannah Daybell were married in the Endowment House. Later, on April 1, 1889, after a law was passed in Utah, they went with others and were married in the Manti Temple.

Fourteen children were born to this marriage. Three were dead at birth and eleven lived until April 1957 when the second son, George F. Price passed away.

The Price family lived on a farm in Charleston, where they held many important civic and church positions until in 1920 they moved to Phoenix, Arizona, because of his health. Their two oldest sons were living in Phoenix at the time.

George Price and Mary Hannah Price were ardent and sincere church workers. They spent twenty years working in the Arizona Temple, while also attending to other church work. They have contributed much time and effort to missionary work as a family. They sent five sons and a daughter on foreign missions. The entire family has spent 46 years on foreign missions and 80 years on Stake missions.

WILLIAM AND ANN DAYBELL WEBSTER

William Webster was born July 17, 1842 at New Whittington, Derbyshire, England, a son of Elisha Webster and Ann Kelstripe Webster. Married Ann Daybell, daughter of Finity Daybell and Mary Draper Daybell. She was born in Seinkinshire, England, April 14, 1846. William died September 21, 1906 in Charleston. Ann died February 3, 1924 in Charleston.

While William lived in England he was a coal miner. The family belonged to the Methodist Church.

On May 3, 1882, William Webster and his wife Ann and six children were baptized into the LDS Church. Later in May of the same year they set sail for the United States on the steamship, Nevada.

They came from New York on the train and arrived in Salt Lake City, June 6, 1882.

They came from Salt Lake City directly to Charleston, where he did carpenter work, painting and farmed on shares for Joseph E. Taylor. They milked cows, and churned butter and took it along with their eggs and other produce to Salt Lake City by ox team. Later he bought a small farm.

After coming to Charleston, three more children were born into this family.

They were the parents of eight children: Elisha, Bertha, John Ender, Agnes, Martha Ann, George William, Susan and Franklin.
